

Photo

Painting With Pinot's Palette

Tables of students at the Painting With Pinot's Palette event hosted by the Student Activities Board at the Heritage Plaza Lawn. Those in attendance were given supplies to paint their very own Red Wolf door hanger.

Tory Lydy, a master's environmental science student from Carbondale, Illinois, painting a hanger.

Students with their brushes, paints and water cups, painting a Red Wolf door hanger.

A-State students painting outside with Pinot's Palette.

From left to right, Brooklyn Wood, a freshman radiology sciences major from Batesville, with Kirsten King, a freshman physical therapist assistant major from Batesville, and Rebekah Rodgers, a freshman business admin major from Marion, painting hangers.

Students seated at spread out tables to provide a socially distant environment for the event.

A painter with their door hanger resembling an A-State Red Wolf.

From left to right clockwise, Javier Strong, a sophomore business management major from Little Rock, with Aleecia Evans a sophomore nursing major from Little Rock, and Skylar West, a sophomore nursing major from Little Rock, and Amara Kokroko a senior nursing education major from Marion, and Mallory Ransom, a sophomore communication disorders major from Jackson, Tennessee, and Joy Byrd, a junior biology major from Pine Bluff, giving a Wolves Up!

Painters watching the instructor and working on their craft. Pinot's Palette is located at 2617 E. Nettleton Ave in Jonesboro and offers weekly events and classes.

Students painting and sitting on spread out blankets on the Lawn.

The instructor from Pinot's Palette leading the activity.

Photos by: Hannah Risker | Photo Editor