

Photo

"Inspired" Exhibition at the Bradbury Art Museum

The "Inspired" exhibition in the Bradbury Art Museum. For the seventh year, students in local high schools were given the chance to create artwork inspired by Bradbury's fall exhibition, "Legends". The exhibit is available Jan. 13 to Feb. 2.

Juror's Merit Award winner Maggie Heigus' lively three-dimensional piece.

A gallery viewer sits and admires the "Inspired" exhibition.

Brian Holmes' Purchase Award Winning piece, "Kings of Duality." Holmes attends Jonesboro High School and was inspired by the artwork titled, "Inner Demons."

"Collectively Shattered," awarded Best in Show to Vivian Morgan from Harrisburg High School. The piece is composed of plaster gauze, acrylic paint and fish net. It is meant to represent "what we show in contrast to what we hide"

An art piece included in the collection.

Crowds of artists, parents, and A-State visitors surround art pieces at the Bradbury Art Museum at the opening reception of "Inspired," Jan. 13.

A lively sculpture included in "Inspired."

Juror's Merit Award winner, "Mr. Bones," an acrylic painting by Lance Collins of Harrisburg High School was inspired by Van Gogh's "Skeleton with Burning Cigarette".

The list of local schools included in the exhibition at the Bradbury.

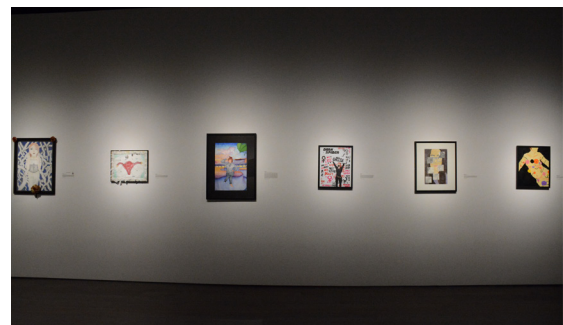

Sadey Bowen's piece "Unknown Fear." Bowen is a student of Harrisburg High School.

An art piece included in the collection.

Jegs Antonio's piece "Imagine" made with markers. The piece was influenced by JooY-oung Choi's "Somnioplexic Resonance."

Artworks hung on the walls of the Bradbury.

Photos of the complete exhibition can be found on the Herald website, theherald.home.blog.