

A-State celebrates the holiday

1. Howl and Scarlet are seen wishing people a happy holiday from the window of the Arkansas State University Administration Building.

2. The A-State theater dancers finish their last performance as the Jazz Orchestra concludes the Jazz for the Holidays event on Dec. 3 at the Fowler Center, Riceland Hall.

5. (From left to right) Students Mimi Imazato, a General Study major, Mahiro Iijima, a computer science major, and Riho Kawashima, a computer science major, all from Japan and are first years, worked together in building a gingerbread house on Dec. 1 at the Multicultural Center.

3. Riley Luttrell, member of WolfLife and wife of the ministry director, dressed in pajamas for the Pancakes and Pajamas event on Dec. 2 at the WolfLife building.

4. The front door of the dorm suite of Collegiate Park Building 6 is decorated with Christmas decor.

8. Mrs. and Mr. Claus took their photo with baby Coleson Hudson during the Pancakes and Pj's on Dec. 3 at the A-State Cooper Alumni Center.

6. (From left to right) Momone Takahashi, a computer science major, and Chiori Sasaya, an exercise science major, who are both from Japan and are first years, held together parts of their gingerbread house waiting till it dried.

7. An Unorthodox Christmas tree located in the front offices of the Women Leadership Center in the Neil Griffin College of Business Building.

9. Holiday stocking products being sold at the Sweet Shoppe.

10. (Photo on the right) Lizbeth Guzman, a sophomore political science major from Bryant, held up her colored in painter canvas during the Holiday Trap & Paint event on Dec 5th at the Pavilion.

Photos by Jessica McMillan | Photo Editor