

Photo

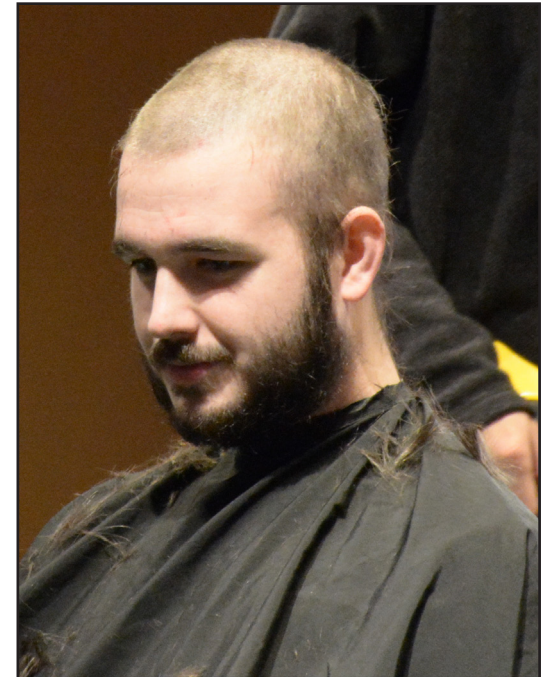

This Week at A-State

1. Red Wolves for St. Jude hosted an All Campus No More Cancer Rally on Tuesday. At this event, the student who brought in the most donations for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital had their head shaved.

2. Students competed in minigames at the All Campus No More Cancer Rally. The goal of this game was for players to be the last one standing with an unpoped balloon.

3. Eli Carpenter, a senior exercise science major from Little Rock, was the lucky "winner" of a shaved head at the All Campus No More Cancer Rally.

4. Nathan Campbell, a sophomore studio art major from Jonesboro, is in the new DNSPE installation at the Bradbury Art Museum. For more on this story, see page 1A.

5. The grand re-opening of the student lounge on the second floor of the Education/Communication building took place Friday.

6. Jordan Carahar and Francesco Gallia from the A-State rugby team, were in the Student Union to invite students to Brickhouse Grill to watch the Red Wolves Rugby team take on Texas A&M Feb. 3.

7. Myketa Taylor, an administrative specialist in the Dept. of Psychology and Counseling, showing off her rain boots and umbrella.

8. Howl's Heroes, a student led organization that fundraises for veterans, held a bake sale in front of the Student Union Tuesday.

PHOTO CREDITS:

Jack Douglas | Photo Editor 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 8

Caroline Averitt | Life Editor 4

Sandra Combs | Herald Adviser 7